1. During July about 20,000 Soviet troops moved into the Taedong-gang area, in the vicinity of Oya-ri (125-44, 38-59) (YD 3718). The troops wore North Korean summer uniforms, and were equipped with Soviet-type rifles, and four hand grenades each.

2. There is a heavy concentration of 180-mm. Stalin guns on the south bank of the Taedong-gang on both sides of the railroad bridge in the Oya-ri area. The guns are placed at 10-meter intervals; the first gun on each side is 100 meters from the railroad bridge, with about 150 guns on the lower south bank and 50 guns on the upper south bank.

3. From 20 to 25 July a camouflaged airstrip was in use 3 kilometers east of the South Sinuiju station. The highway was used as a runway and about 50 hangars near the strip were camouflaged as farmhouses. Thirty MIG-15's and 20 new-type Soviet fighters were based at this field. Pilots of the new-type fighters operate the plane from a reclining position because of the excessive speed of the planes. The airstrip is defended by 10 new-type tracked vehicles carrying three anti-aircraft guns and one low-angle gun each; the strip is guarded by 1,000 non-Oriental Soviet troops and about 100 Czech troops.
